What is a Uniform Commercial Code Lien? (UCC Lien)

Legal code adopted by most states that codifies various laws dealing with commercial transactions, primarily those involving the sale of goods, both tangible and intangible.

The code covers regulations on commercial paper, commercial letters of credit bankruptcy, warranties and other commercial activities.

In plain language, you may have the option of securing your inventory, equipment, property, etc; -- similar to the system banks use when you buy a car on credit terms. (i.e. a lien is filed against the title of the car notifying other prospective buyers that the bank owns the car and must be paid. Should the customer default on payment terms, or attempt to sell your property prior to paying you or file bankruptcy, you have a secured interest giving a secured priority over unsecured creditors.)
